

Savant Thakur was a PhD student within the Department of Physiology. “Strive towards your goals, just push on and never give up. Anyone who has a dream and wants to achieve something can and the disability should be no barrier.” That was the life motto of Savant Thakur – a man with a single-minded determination to improve the lives of others with Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy.

Sadly, Savant fell short of time in his quest to find a cure, but he made incredible inroads with his award-winning studies into muscle wasting disorders at the University of Melbourne’s Centre for Muscle Research in the Department of Physiology.

The 27-year-old leaves a legacy of research that will contribute, as he hoped, to quality of life for those with muscular dystrophy across the globe.
